PROGRAM OVERVIEW

Study the ecology and wildlife of the Namibian Savanna Woodland. On this unique program, participants practice wildlife management, participate in hands-on conservation efforts, discover spectacular desert landscapes and ecology, track elephants, visit one of the greatest national parks in Africa and observe the magnificent diversity of wildlife up close. This enriching program gives students an insight into the fascinating diversity of Africa’s ecosystems while meeting field biologists and conservationists.

ACADEMICS

Participate in fieldwork, practice various ecological sampling techniques, train in the use of field apparatus, and conduct undergraduate research. In addition, participants will study the management of a large national park of international importance, conservation of predators and their conflict with humans, and international tourism.
